Speaker: Kannan Soundararajan
Department of Mathematics,
Stanford University

Title: Random multiplicative functions in short intervals

Abstract:
I’ll discuss joint work with Sourav Chatterjee on the distribution of random multiplicative functions in short intervals. The motivation for studying this problem comes from number theory. Using Stein’s method for normal approximation, we establish that in a wide range the sum of a random multiplicative function in certain short intervals is approximately Gaussian.